SUPREME COURT NEXT

Expected That Case Will Be Rushed So
That Final Ruling Can Be Obtained
Before January First
When Law Becomes Effective.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 22.—The Adamson eight hour law was held unconstitutional here today by Judge Wm. C. Hook in the United States district court.

Judge Hook directed the receivers of the Missouri, Oklahoma & Gulf railroad, who brought the original action in this case to enjoin the law from going into effect, to assist the government in expediting the case to the supreme court. The United States for final decision, and instructed them, through the attorneys, to invite the representatives of every railroad in this country to participate in the hearings before the highest court in the land.

This was requested in the government's motion to dismiss the injunction portion of the railroad, the government desiring to avoid "prolonged, unnecessary and scattered litigation through the hearing of courts similar to that now being held in every federal district in the United States through which their lines run."
It is expected that the final decision now as to whether the law will be enforced after January 1, will be handled after that time. A transcript of the present case will be filed at supreme court before it reconvenes December Files Motion.

Action in the case was precipitated yesterday, when Frank Hagaman, special counsel for the government,
filed a motion to dismiss the injunction portion of the case. Judge Hook declined to grant the motion, and the case will be heard by the supreme court.

Should Judge Hook decide against the government's contention and hold the law unconstitutional, the motion asks that the receivers for the missouri, Oklahoma & Gulf railroad be appointed by the court, and that the government be directed to assist the receivers in bringing the case immediately before the supreme court, which reconvenes December Files Motion.

SOUTH SEA ISLANDS

WILL BE ORGANIZED

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Tokyo, Nov. 22.—Dr. Inazo Nitobe, the well known Japanese author, voiced his opinion before the Asiatic society yesterday that the economic and educational development of the South Sea Islands, and even one great nation will come into existence in the South Sea Islands. He had just returned from an extensive tour of the South Sea Islands, and he said that the United States for its achievements in the Philippines. He said that the Philippines Islands will assert their rights.
The nation will do the most for the cause of humanity which recognizes the right of the people to govern themselves. The United States is among the foremost to recognize this principle and give them a chance to develop.

The speaker defined the South Sea
Islands as including the Philippines,
Java, Borneo, Sumatra, Celebes, New Guinea, the Malay Peninsula and thousands of smaller groups. He pointed out that nearly one-half of these resided in Java alone. The sparseness of the population elsewhere, formed the result of disease—malaria, fever, dysentery, small pox, and cholera. "If we can free the islands of these conditions," Dr. Nitobe declared, "the population would be doubled or trebled in a few decades."

IS IT POSSIBLE

40 CENT DIET?

Chicago Health Department Begins Experiment to Demonstrate How Living Cost May Be Reduced.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Nov. 22.—Twelve employees of the Chicago health department today began a two weeks' experiment in living on a diet of 40 cents a day. The diet is to be made up of the following items: At the first meal, breakfast served at 8:20 o'clock, Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner, directed the "diet squad" to learn to eat slowly, asserting the "faster you eat, the more you eat." Forty minutes for breakfast, the menu for which consisted of fresh apples, liver, bacon, one egg, muffins, butter and coffee.

Each dieter was pledged to deny himself all nourishment except the meals prepared at the school. Dr. Robertson announced, however, they might drink water, chew gum and smoke if they desire. The experiment is attracting wide attention, especially by physicians and economists, numbers of whom asked for specific menus and report of progress. Six men and six women are making the test.

Dr. Robertson said that several members of the diet squad did not eat everything that was served them for breakfast. He said that if we are to keep the cost of the diet within 40 cents a day for each person, said Dr. Robertson, Dr. Eva C. Hansen, a member of the squad, said she ate more breakfast than she had in a long time.

There was some change in the weight of members of the squad when they stepped on the scales after the first meal. Dr. A. J. Stokes, the heaviest member, had gained three and a quarter pounds. Another man lost two pounds while another gained one pound, and two gained a half pound each. One woman gained two pounds and another one pound.

REPORT COLLUSION

TO BOOST PRICES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Nov. 22.—A voluminous report said to contain evidence of collusion between coal dealers and retail merchants to advance the price of coal products, was turned over today to United States District Attorney
Charles Clyne by Hinton G. Clabaugh, head of the local bureau of the Sinking fund. The evidence will, it is said, be presented to the special grand jury recently sworn in to inquire into the high cost of food.
The report is said to show that the price of food sold to consumers has been raised in many instances without regard to the increased cost of production.

GERMAN FOUNDRYMAN

IMPORTANT IN WAR

Hamborn-On-The-Rhine, Nov. 22.—
One of the most important wheels in the German war machine is August Thyssen, in antebellum days a coal dealer and manager of the first rank but now, in view of the industrialization of war, General Field Marshal of the industrial army, and collaborator and confidant of Hindenburg.
He is a dark, stout, powerful man with a tremendous scope of his work he clings stubbornly to old fashioned methods where he himself is concerned.

He will not tolerate a stenographer for his personal use, but writes all his letters by hand. His correspondence is large, much larger than he can attend to, along with his other duties at his office. So he takes what is left over home with him to his Kettwig, and after dinner finishes it if it takes until the wee small hours of the morning.

Despite his enormous wealth he has never personally owned an automobile. He is now riding in one to save his own time. He goes and comes from his home to his office on foot or in a street car. He wears a dark, dark colored business suit instead of the formal "morning suit," so generally affected in Germany, and looks less like a multi-millionaire than the average German.
From the very outset of his climb from comparative poverty to great riches, and above all to very great reputation as an industrial leader, Herr Thyssen has steadfastly refused titles of all kinds.

Representative Fitzgerald Believes
This Would Aid in Reducing the Country.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Nov. 22.—Representative Fitzgerald, democrat, chairman of the house appropriation committee, announced today that he favored an embargo on foodstuffs, and it was his purpose to prepare a bill and to press
the subject early to the coming session of congress.

"Two reasons, chiefly, compel me to favor embargo legislation on foodstuffs," said Mr. Fitzgerald. "It is the most effective weapon in our controversy with Great Britain over her unwarranted outrages and indefensible blacklists of American merchants. As our foodstuffs are needed abroad, an embargo will be more effective than years' months of diplomatic negotiations which are in continuance of the indefensible practices against our rights."

"The embargo also should be imposed for purely domestic reasons. The prices of foodstuffs have reached levels that are bringing widespread distress. Many hundreds of thousands of our people are suffering from lack of the necessities of life. Wholesale prices of many commodities are less abroad today than they were a year ago; here the retail prices have advanced alarmingly."

"The argument that nothing should be done to interfere with the expansion of our foreign trade, does not impress me. Of what profit is it if our foreign trade is to grow with leaps and bounds, while our people are brought to the verge of starvation as a result of it?"

"It seems to be generally agreed here that the coming session of congress will see a fight over the embargo proposal."

German Submersible Clears Coast Un-

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Nantucket, Nov. 22.—The Deutschland, returning to Germany with a valuable cargo, was believed today to have left American waters in safety.
Darkness which set in soon after she started from New London, Conn., yesterday afternoon, prevented observation of the submersible's progress along the shore, and there was no word from her since she passed Watch Hill, R. I., at sunset last evening, a barely distinguishable object ten miles off.

It maintained her speed of ten knots an hour, it was figured she should have passed Nantucket Shoals lightship in the darkness early this morning. Then with open sea ahead the Deutschland could set out on her course which her commander, Captain Koenig, hoped again to evade vessels of allied nations, supposedly watching for her coming.

LITTLE SNOW CAUSES

POOR DEER HUNTING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Marquette, Nov. 22.—Probably as high as 6000 deer will be killed during the present season in Northern Wisconsin than would have been the case had the snow remained on the ground throughout the season.
According to numerous hunters returning from the woods.

The advent of warmer weather, which is leaving the ground bare, is bringing hundreds of hunters out of the woods. Deer were plentiful, as shown by the tracks when the snow was on the ground. Under the law only bucks can be shot, and it would be "without" without snow on the ground, to track them. The biggest killings were made on the first few inches of snow covered the ground, but since the warmer weather has set in hunters report poor success.

BRITISH HOSPITAL

SHIP BRITANIC IS

SUNK; FIFTY LOST

Report 1,106 Survivors in Destruction of Vessel by Mine or Torpedo in Aegean Sea.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, Nov. 22.—The British hospital ship Britannic has been sunk with a loss of fifty lives, says a British official announcement today.

The Britannic was sunk by a mine or torpedo yesterday in the Aegean sea, it is said. There were 1,106 survivors, of whom about twenty were injured. Full particulars of the disaster, it is announced, will be published as soon as they are received.
It was reported in a special dispatch from London on December 6
last, that the 47,500 ton White Star liner Britannic, then recently completed, would be used as a hospital ship by the British government, making her the largest hospital ship in connection with an equipment of 6,000 beds. Last June, however, it was reported in the news despatches that the Britannic had been dispatched to the Aegean sea, where it had been returned to the White Star line for restoration into a passenger steamer.

Off Isle of Kea.
The Britannic was sunk off the Isle of Kea, southeast of Attica, in the Aegean. She carried 1,000 British sick and wounded men. The Britannic was equipped with thirty-five lifeboats and the loss of life incident to the sinking is supposed to have been small.

Large Vessel.
The White Star liner Britannic was the largest vessel of the White Star line. Built in 1914, she was 261 feet long, 27 feet 6 inches deep, and 102 feet beam. Her length was somewhat less than that of the White Star liner Olympic, which measured 882 feet, but the Britannic had a greater tonnage. The Olympic being 46,300 as compared with the Britannic, 47,500.

Late in November, 1915, it was reported that the Britannic was being fitted out for the Dardanelles service
as a hospital ship.

Not in Service.
New York, Nov. 22.—The Britannic, but for the Liverpool-New York trade, was never in the service. She was about ready to be turned over for her initial voyage when the war began, and she was commandeered and fitted up for hospital purposes.

District Attorney Clyne at Chicago
Will Look into Alleged Organ-

Supply.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, Nov. 22.—With the recently obtained information according to United States officials apparently tends to support the belief that certain produce dealers are permitting fruits and vegetables to spoil in the fields, the prices may be increased, a corps of federal agents directed by United States District Attorney Clyne
today was searching for the persons responsible for the alleged practice.

Intimations have reached Mr.
Clyne, he said, that through organized efforts, agents have been sent through the country purchasing supplies and preventing their shipment to middle western markets. These complaints, according to Mr. Clyne, indicate that several acres of pumpkins, twenty-five carloads of potatoes and a trainload of cabbages have been destroyed to further the food shortage, and wholesalers in Norfolk, Philadelphia and Saginaw are obtaining quantities of beans in storage while the prices rise.

POLICE IN CHASE FOR FRED MARTIN CAPTURE LUNATIC

Farmers on Altan Road Near Beloit Sound Alarm That Man Sought for Murder Was Hiding in Barn.

Beloit police engaged in an exciting chase Monday night after a man whom they supposed was Fred Martin, wanted for the murder of H. A. Krause in the lonely river camp above the Lias City, only to capture a lunatic, escaped from the state hospital at Mendota.

Farmers on the Altan road, north of Beloit, became alarmed over the presence of a suspicious appearing man in their neighborhood. Recalling the theory that criminals, haunted by the thought of their deeds, often return to the place of their crimes, they believed that the ex-convict, accused of the Krause murder, had come back to the scene of the tragedy.

The man had been first seen in the afternoon by Mrs. Simpson, 12 years old, daughter of Duncan Simpson, as she was trudging along the road returning home from the Crist school. The fellow was unkempt and dirty, and had rather wild hair, and somewhat resembled the prison picture of Martin. The stranger kept peering over his shoulder in the direction of the house where he lived, and the shooting was done a few weeks ago. The little girl was frightened by the meeting.

The stranger was seen at several farms and seemed to want to sleep in barns, but was shooed away until he went to the A. T. Hallett farm, where he was given supper and permission to sleep in the barn.

The man's appearance and suspicious actions aroused the fears of the family. Neighbors compared observations of his appearance and the fact that he was the murderer.

A call was sent to the Beloit police and Detective J. W. Diamond and Patrolman Van Ostrand hurried in the detective's automobile to the barn where it had been made certain that the man could not escape.

Anticipating a possible desperate struggle, the two officers with their guns climbed into the loft and played their flashlights on a covering form in one corner.

The officers were soon convinced that the man was not Martin. Frigatened by their appearance, he told a broken tale. He gave his name as Harry McDermott. He said he had been a bookkeeper for the Pennsylvania railroad at East Falls, Pa., and was trying to beat his way back east.

The officers agreed to further him on his journey as far as Beloit and he was given a taxi ride to the police station. The man's actions led to the belief that he had escaped from some institution.

His suspicion was borne out by the facts. The morning when Chief Quinlan telephoned the state asylum for the insane at Mendota and ascertained the man had escaped there. The asylum authorities promised to send an attendant here to take him back.

At a meeting called by J. R. Jensen last evening a boys' work committee was formed at the local Y. M. C. A. The committee, of which Mr. Jensen is secretary, includes S. K. Kohn, John C. Hanchett, H. S. Lovejoy, F. K. Doane, J. T. Shear and Rollo Dobson.

This committee is planning a number of activities for boys in the Junior department at the association, and will endeavor to provide for them entertainments and advantages similar to those enjoyed by the adult members of the association.

The matter of the new boys members was taken up by the committee in collaboration with the Secretary of the Junior department at the association, and it was decided to continue their club as in past years except for a few minor changes as to membership privileges. The club is organized for all those boys who are prevented from getting in the regular junior classes. In addition to the gym work many other features are planned for these boys.

It was further decided to organize an employment bureau at the "Y" for all boys who seek work in this city. This will give them an opportunity to secure jobs and receive pay for their memberships. Citizens of Janesville are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to secure boys for various odd jobs.

SEVEN TAKE TESTS FOR FIRE POLICE

Examinations Given by Board of Five for Police Department and Two as Fire Workmen.

Janesville's boosting of firemen and policemen's pay has evidently proved an impetus to bring more men into line for jobs in both departments. Five took the fire and police commission civil service examination for police jobs and two for positions in the fire department.

Norman Forman, Patrick J. Slein, Ivan W. Barr, Peter Bohaker and W. D. McGowan want to preserve the dignity of the law under Chief Champion, while John H. Hagan and Oscar E. Wikom wish to battle fires.

The examinations were given Monday night by the commission. The results of the tests have not been made public as yet by Mayor Farnham, who is secretary of the board. At the present time Chief Henry C. Klein of the fire department is forced to work under a handicap, due to a shortage of men. At least two more are needed and if Milligan and Wikom have passed the tests they will receive jobs as firemen.

NO FINE TURKEY DINNER FOR GREEN COUNTY BOARD

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Monroe, Wis., Nov. 22.—Due to the H. C. of L. the present session of the Green county board of supervisors will go on record as the first in the history of the county during which a turkey dinner was not served to the members during their annual visit to the county farm. The visit Tuesday was merely one of inspection.

It has been the custom of Superintendent and Matron R. C. Whitcomb to annually serve a spread which is looked forward to with a great deal of anticipation by the members of the board and the county officials, and this custom has been observed during each of the forty years they have been in charge of the county farm—until the H. C. of L. this year caused the abandonment of the rule.

Due to the rule of economy which has been adopted by the present session of the county board, even more than during past years, the members of that body also abandoned their usual practice of hiring vehicles for their transportation to the county farm, and made the trip of a little over two miles and a half each way on foot. The pedestrian trip was partly in the interest of economy, and partly through a desire on the part of the members to be able to inspect the Ardrie road, for which $10,000 has been appropriated for the building of a concrete highway between the city and the county farm.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Chicago, Nov. 22.—The Central Division of the A. A. U. is opposed to the proposal of National A. A. U. officials to raise the bar against women swimmers. The question will be decided by the National body at a meeting in New York, Nov. 26.

The Detroit Athletic club has been awarded the Central A. A. U. championships and some of the swimming events. The basketball, wrestling, 50 and 100 yard swim, fancy diving, water polo, and mile swimming championships were awarded to the Illinois Athletic club. The 440 and 880 yard track events went to the Hamilton club of Chicago.

The track and tug-of-war awards will be made later.

DUNNE LOST IN ILLINOIS; SON WORRIED SO MUCH HE LOST FOOTBALL GAME.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) An Arbor, Nov. 22.—Harry Tutthill, the well known trainer of the University of Michigan football eleven, who also conditions the Detroit football team, had an unusual alibi for Cornell's defeat of Michigan. Maurice Dunne pointed short at a critical period and this gave Cornell an opportunity which they improved and won the game. Tutthill says that Dunne worried so much about the defeat of his father, who was candidate for re-election as governor of Illinois, that the strain went to his toes.

Ann Arbor, Nov. 22.—"Red" McKee, catcher for the Detroit Americans, has a brother who is an aviator. TY COBB IN MOVIES, BALKS AT MAKING LOVE

Detroit, Nov. 22.—Ty Cobb, the famous baseball player, has succumbed to the inducements of a motion picture company. The Georgian's first film will soon be released. It is understood. According to trustworthy information, Cobb gave the director very little trouble when the play—a baseball story—was being filmed, but he was asked to make love to the heroine. Cobb, it is claimed, absolutely refused to indulge in Greek-Roman tactics, so that part of his performance may be considered rather tame.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.) Chicago, Nov. 22.—George "Knock-out" Brown, a Chicago middleweight, has called off his trip to Australia. He was to have sailed from San Francisco, Nov. 27.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Main tonight: Thursday: unsettled; colder north and west portions.

LOCAL CONDITIONS.

Janesville is betwixt and between property and its counter part. The need of workers in factories producing munitions of war has taken many of the wage earners out of the city and the increased cost of living has increased the cost of those who remain. Promised a decided decrease in the cost of food products four years ago, the average householder views with awe the report that butter is above forty cents, eggs have also skyrocketed, potatoes well over the two dollar mark, flour going up, and nothing cheap but meat products, owing to a local condition which outside conditions have nothing to do with.

The Commercial club has under consideration at this time several factory propositions that would give employment to many workmen if they are brought to the city, but care must be taken in selecting the new factory sites. We do not want any more Art Study, Elgin and Lye concerns, or any of the investment of capital in blue sky propositions. Delays may be dangerous, but better take time and carefully consider conditions before bringing a false alarm concern to the city to "cheat" the citizens, and then fly away to "suck the blood" from some other community.

Janesville could furnish employment for several hundred factories employing many labor. Such factories would be most beneficial to the city as a whole. The institutions employing women have about sapped the natural resources dry and now we need institutions that will give employment to men at good living wages. Perhaps some of the local factories could be aided to expand if it was suggested to them, and the financial support given. However, this is the time to do something while the field is open.

Owing to conservatism in the past Janesville has not been seriously affected by any recent financial panics, while other communities have been practically bankrupt. Better go slow and be on the safe side than put all the eggs in the basket. If nothing comes of the present factory propositions the public can rest assured it was not best that the city should acquire them.

OLD MEN AND JOBS.
A recent newspaper dispatch reports a movement to secure pensions for superannuated government employees. The graybeard of the department has always been one of Washington's most perplexing problems. In spite of all the red tape that interferes with government efficiency, the government clerk is apt to be a hard person to get rid of. It is a hard proposition to know what to do with him when he gets by the age of great old efficiency.

Business is much the same. There are a great many concerns that keep him along much after the time when he really needs his pay. But in perhaps more he is coldly and curiously told that his place is needed by a younger man. It is a bitter day when he is turned aside. His heart and hands are as ready to work as ever, but the snap and vim of youth have gone. He absolutely is not worth a great deal of money, but the world seems to turn to dust and ashes when he is told so.

The proposition in the movement referred to is to establish a government pension system for aged employees. It may be possible to work this out. But the taxpayers already regard the cost of government work as too high. If the departments could be systematized by the same kind of business ability that organizes a big factory, they ought to be able to pay the present wages, provide pensions, and not increase the costs at all.

The individual worker needs to think carefully over this question of superannuation. Most men grow into elderly life without realizing that their power is gradually slipping from them. They spend money freely and then are out of work with the social system because some one does not supply the needs which they themselves have failed to anticipate.

In the long run it pays a business concern to have a heart. It cannot decide all relations between its employees simply on the basis of buying so much labor for so much cash. It has to create favorable sentiment in its own workshops and in the community it serves. Where it can recognize long terms of service by special favors, it creates a sentiment of loyalty that does not otherwise exist.

THE GOVERNOR'S JOB.
It will not escape the attention of aspiring politicians that the two foremost candidates of the recent election had been governors of states, and that a number of our recent presidents reached the White House by the same path. If a man thinks he has presidential timber in him, he evidently will try to attain his ambition by this means.

The governorship of a state offers far more chance to a man of first-class ability than any other political position. A United States senatorship is commonly considered a higher office. But the United States senate is never a stepping stone to the White House.

In a state governorship the executive has great opportunities to display leadership. He is or ought to be for the time being the biggest man of the group about him. If he has sensible, constructive ideas, his position gives him great opportunities. He can initiate reforms, systematize business, remove wastes, inaugurate measures of social betterment, and the news of these things spreads beyond state limits. The politicians from far and near keep their eye on him. He is called on for addresses over a wide territory, and soon acquires a national reputation.

The member of congress, on the other hand, is tied down by the traditions of an unwieldy body. He finds men of equal ability, great experience, and wider influence who have opposite convictions. He finds himself held down by the red tape of committee, and the pressure of a vast system of conflicting interests. It may be even before he gets any chance to make himself heard.

There are many disappointments though in the path of ambitious governors. Commonly they have to come from a state regarded as doubtful before they are considered presidential possibilities. And many regulations that look big inside of state limits begin to dwindle and fade the moment they are offered before a wider audience.

California proposes to celebrate Nov. 27 as Lemon day, while a large number of the inhabitants of the United States think the occasion was thoroughly observed November 7.

After paying a dollar more for a pair of shoes, the peaceful American citizen who has been indifferent about the war concludes that it is a horrible thing and ought to be stopped.

Isn't it queer that the oath of faithful performance of their duties taken by the congressmen says nothing about distributing the pork and finding the clerkships?

Some men can't pay their grocer's bill on account of the money they lost on the election, and they can't pay their election bets because of the grocer's bill.

Instead of giving your friends some of those tooled leather, fancy goods, why not give them a real present like a dozen of eggs?

About now the Thanksgiving turkey is celebrating the second anniversary of his death in the cold storage warehouse.

Although it is almost impossible to get any work done, there are a good many people who say they can't find anything to do.

The same people who are in a hurry for congress to get together and pass some laws will soon be getting in a hurry for congress to adjourn.

The Walking clubs that have sprung up in many places would be more popular if walking cost more money.

Among the causes of high cost of living is the cost of having it investigated by the government.

DEATH TAKES AGED

AUSTRIAN EMPEROR

asked that his physician be summoned, complaining of pains in the throat.

The emperor appeared to be in a more restless state. A few moments later, according to the details furnished by the doctors, he made a gesture, pointing to his throat. A second afterward he was dead. The members of the imperial family were immediately summoned, as were the officials of state, who prepared an announcement of his death.

Emperor William was immediately informed of the passing of his ally, the message being sent over the telephone, which links the headquarters of the German army with the Schoenbrunn palace. Nothing has yet been decided, it is said, with regard to the emperor's accession.

Emperor Francis Joseph has for sixty-eight years been one of the great figures in the affairs of Europe and the world at large, and although his extended reign has been clouded with many grievous personal afflictions, notably the suicide of his only son and heir, the assassination of his wife, and the murder of his nephew and heir, the Archduke Ferdinand and his consort which precipitated the present war—it has been marked also by events of its teaching and beneficent statesmanship. He has seen Hungary emerge from a condition of open rebellion which was quelled with the aid of Russia; his Italian dominions were saved by the genius of General Radetzky; he cast his influence strongly, although ineffectually, to prevent the Crimean War. After the Austro-French War in 1859 he was compelled to sign the treaty of peace of Villafranca by which Lombardy was ceded to Italy. In 1866 he lost the Duchy of Holstein and in the same year, as a result of the war with Prussia, he lost Venetia also. That year was fatal to the supremacy of Austria in Germany, the contest being decided in favor of Prussia by the treaties of Nikolburg and Prague respectively. The Turkish provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina were, by the decision of the Berlin Congress in 1878, placed under the administration of Austria-Hungary. These are some of the great events of the reign which has just come to a close.

A Monarch and a Father.
Since the last illness of the Emperor-King, (Francis Joseph is King of Hungary as well as Emperor of Austria), became generally known the eyes of the entire world have been turned towards Schoenbrunn, the beautiful summer palace on the outskirts of Vienna, in which the Emperor-King had been fighting his last battle. The venerable monarch suffered from inflammation of the lungs. His spare, sinewy body put up a heroic fight at the command of his capable will, but from the beginning the chances were against him. There was not enough strength in the enfeebled frame to throw off the grip of the fatal disease.

With his passing there goes from the circle of European sovereigns the most imperial, most kindly and the most princely man that has filled the throne. When he is laid away in his final resting place the people of Austria and of Hungary will have seen the last of a monarch who in the truest sense of the word was the father of his people; a noble, unselfish and modest man; a man born to inherit the heights of human achievement, but whose life bowed his head in the deepest of sorrow. His people have called him the silent sufferer, the uncompromising martyr, the monarch who not only wore the crown of the empire, but to whose brow fate had bound the Crown of Thorns. And silently he suffered. His sense of duty to his imperial and royal obligations made him forget and subordinate his grievous personal afflictions.

For nearly 68 years Francis Joseph occupied the throne of the dual monarchy. He followed his uncle in 1848, and those were troublous days at home and abroad. War on his frontiers and revolutions within his territory called for the most drastic and wise administration from this eighteen year old boy. In the beginning the arms of Austria were victorious, but the initial successes were followed by defeats at Solferino and Koenigsgratz. Hungary still gave the young king much trouble and in addition to these national afflictions, Francis Joseph had to face a tragic series of family afflictions. His brother, Archduke Maximilian, was shot in Mexico in 1867; his only son, Rudolph, committed suicide near Vienna in 1889, and finally, in 1890 his wife, the Empress Elizabeth, was assassinated by an Italian Anarchist at Geneva.

Never once during all these years of difficult administration of his realm and personal sorrow did the determined man whose life has just come to an end give way and declare his cross to be too heavy. Bitter family dissensions marked the last twenty years of his reign, and unceasing conflicts among the various nationalities that go to compose the phantom empire of Austria darkened the evening of his life. Often it has been said of this man that only the care that he exercised held the dual monarchy together.

Francis Joseph was the idol of his people, and especially of the inhabitants of his capital city, Vienna. His tall, gaunt figure was familiar to every Viennese. He roamed through the streets unguarded, bowing gravely to the salutations of his loving people. If it became known that he was to leave the city, a large crowd invariably would congregate on his route to the railroad station to see him drive by. He was imperial, yet democratic, and for years he held weekly audiences with the common people at which any one of his subjects could appeal to him for the setting of a wrong. He would speak to the Viennese in their beloved dialect, and they revere today that in the intimacy of his own family it was his pleasure to use the language of the salubrious and austere lonelines hedged about by the extreme etiquette of the most ceremonious court of Europe, their hearts went out to him, and when they spoke of the old man as "Our Francis" the appellation was sympathetic and sincere. It has been the custom of certain religious festivals, to march through the streets of Vienna, from the Hofburg to the Church of St. Stephen. Ten years ago his people would greet the dignified figure with cheers and more or less volubrious evidences of their loyalty and love. But more recently, as they perceived and commented upon the weight of his years, the noisy salutations ceased and in their stead came a silent but heartfelt greeting to the noble and venerable monarch. He was still the same imperious ruler, but the people said "he is bowed with years and perhaps this is the last time we will see him. And after they had gone by they turned away sadly and quietly. Francis Joseph was beloved for his kindness, his amiability, his modesty and his rectitude. His determination and ability had saved the empire from a hundred dangers, and his high moral courage had made it possible for him to hold in leash the fretting and threatening aspirations of Czechs, Poles, Magyar, Serb, Ruthenian and Bulgarian.

Became Emperor in 1848.
Francis Joseph I. was born in the Royal Palace of Schoenbrunn, Vienna, Aug. 18, 1830. He was the eldest son of Archduke Francis Charles, second son of Emperor Francis I. of Austria and of Archduchess Sophie, Princess of Bavaria. Ferdinand I. abdicated, the crown was renounced by Francis Charles, and Francis Joseph became Emperor of Austria on Dec. 2, 1848.

Francis Joseph's marriage took place on April 24, 1854. His bride was Princess Elizabeth Amalie Eugenie, daughter of Duke Maximilian Joseph, and cousin on her mother's side to the King of Bavaria. Four children were born to the Royal couple. They were the Archduchess Gisela, born in 1856, who became the wife of Prince Leopold, second son of Prince Louis of Bavaria; Archduke Rudolph, born in 1858 and died in 1889, and the Archduchess Marie Valerie who was born in 1868 and who in 1890 became the wife of Archduke Francis Salvator. By the death of Rudolph Archduke Charles Louis, brother of Francis Joseph, became heir to the throne but he relinquished his right of succession in favor of his son, Franz Ferdinand.

The life of the late Emperor has been singularly eventful in political occurrences. On ascending the throne he found the empire shaken by internal dissensions and his first step was to promise a free and constitutional government to the country. The course of events compelled him to give internal peace and freedom for government and legislative action, he promulgated the edict of Schoenbrunn, Sept. 26, 1851, in which he declared the government "responsible to no political authority other than the throne." He centralized the government of his heterogeneous nationalities at Vienna and inaugurated a series of fiscal and commercial reforms favorable to the interests of the middle classes.

Refuses Russian Proposal.
In 1853-54 the Emperor endeavored, though in vain, to induce Emperor Nicholas to abandon his ambitious designs against Turkey, and further insisted that autocrat's displeasure by refusing to assist Russia against the Western Powers.

The Reichsrath was enlarged by Imperial patent, March 5, 1860, and the Emperor sanctioned the principle of the responsibility of ministers, May 1, 1862. The Convention of Gastein, signed Aug. 14, 1866, which transferred the government of Schleswig to Prussia, and that of Olmutz to Austria, was shortly afterwards confirmed by the Emperor and the King of Prussia at Salzburg. The Emperor issued an important manifesto to his people Sept. 20, 1865, in which he expressed very conciliatory intentions toward the people of Hungary and Croatia.

Disputes over Holstein early in 1866 resulted in the declaration of war between Prussia and Austria. The Emperor showed such devotion in the struggle which ensued, and the fortunes of war having been adverse, at once made peace and applied his energies to the difficult task of reconstructing the Empire. This work he was powerfully aided by Count Beust. One of the principal results of the policy pursued by Count Beust was the coronation of Francis Joseph as King of Hungary in Pest on June 8, 1867.

The Hapsburg Line.

The Imperial and Royal Family of Austria descends from Rudolph von Hapsburg, a German Count, born in 1218, who was declared Emperor of Germany in 1273. The male line died out in 1740 with Emperor Karl VI. whose only daughter, Maria Theresa, gave her hand in 1735 to Duke Franz of Lorraine and Tuscany, afterwards Kaiser Franz I. of Germany, of the House of Lorraine, who thereby became the founder of the new line of Hapsburg-Lorraine. Maria Theresa was succeeded, in 1780, by her son, Joseph II., who, dying in 1790, left the crown to his brother Leopold II., at whose death in 1792 his son Franz I. ascended the throne, who reigned till 1835, and, having been married four times, left a large family, the members of which and their descendants form the present Imperial House. Franz was the first sovereign to assume the title of Emperor, or Kaiser, of Austria, after having been crowned by Napoleon to renounce the Imperial Crown of Germany, for more than five centuries in the Hapsburg family.

The assumption of the title of Emperor of Austria took place on Aug. 1, 1804. Franz I. was succeeded by his son, the Emperor Ferdinand I., who was known also as King Ferdinand V. of Hungary on whose abdication, Dec. 2, 1848, the crown fell to his nephew, the late Emperor-King Joseph I.

The common head of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy is the Emperor of Austria and Apostolic King of Hungary. The crown is hereditary in the Hapsburg-Lorraine dynasty, and is succeeded by right of primogeniture and lineal succession to males and (on failure of males) to females. The monarch must be a member of the Roman Catholic church. He is styled "His Imperial and Apostolic Royal Majesty," being "Emperor of Austria, King of Bohemia, etc., and Apostolic King of Hungary."

Disputes over Holstein early in 1866 resulted in the declaration of war between Prussia and Austria. The Emperor showed such devotion in the struggle which ensued, and the fortunes of war having been adverse, at once made peace and

OWEN HAS STARTED

PRIVATE PRACTICE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—Attorney General Walter C. Owen has already entered upon the private practice of law. He spends his mornings at the offices of Richmond & Jackson. It is understood that the firm will change its name at the commencement of the year, and will then be known as Richmond, Jackson & Owen.

So far Attorney General Owen has made no move to present his resignation to the governor. Just what his plans are in the matter are not known and he declines to discuss the matter. Not having the matter officially before him, the governor has declined to make comment, although it is known that a number of names have already been suggested to the governor as available appointees.

PECULIAR FOOTBALL.
MUSKIE HAD ONE OF THOSE GLASS ARMS.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Albion, Mich., Nov. 22.—One of the most unusual plays in the history of Michigan football was made here yesterday in a game between the Albion and Otsego high schools. On two successive occasions an Albion player, standing behind his own goal, hurried forward passes to a teammate who caught the ball behind the line. Two safeties were scored against Albion as a result.

COUNCIL MAPS OUT EXTENSIVE PAVING PROGRAM FOR 1917

IMPROVEMENTS WILL BE MADE
NEXT YEAR ON IMPORTANT
CITY THOROUGHFARES.

BRICK MAIN STREETS

Brick Pavements Will Be Laid on River, South Main and Bluff
Streets.—Will Pave South
Franklin.

CITY'S PAVING PROGRAM AS ANNOUNCED FOR 1917

These Streets With Brick.
South Bluff between Milwaukee and Court.
South Franklin, Milwaukee to Pleasant.
South Main, Racine to brewery.
South River, Pleasant to School.
Fourth avenue, Milwaukee to Pleasant, South River to bridge.
Fourth avenue, North River to bridge.
Fourth street, North Main to North Bluff.
Streets Optional.
South Franklin, Pleasant to College.
South Bluff, First to gas house.
Property owners will decide on brick, sheet asphalt, asphalt concrete or two-course reinforced concrete.
Asphalt Macadam.
Jackman, South Third to Garfield.
Garfield, Oakland to Jackman.

By adopting the recommendations of the board of public works, the city council in its meeting Tuesday afternoon provided for a 1917 program of street improvements which contemplates the laying of brick pavements on the above specified streets in the business section, and pavements of various types on other streets which have been marked for improvement for some time. The schedule includes pavements for North Bluff street and South Main street, two of the main arteries of travel leading into the city.

The commission specified brick for the streets in the business section, asphalt macadam for two smaller jobs, and the alternative of brick, sheet asphalt or concrete for the other streets. The commission also specified that the streets as property owners themselves decided.

The action was taken after long deliberation and study and is expected to meet with the instant approval of tax payers benefited. Matters have been considered and worked out to the extent of saving hundreds of dollars and the commission feels that their action regarding the improvements will meet with little or no opposition.

Under certain existing conditions it has been determined that the brick of the several streets specified will cost property owners less than any other type of material for the reason that on the streets scheduled for this type of pavement heavy and sound bases are in at the present time. These streets carry a heavier traffic than the others and it has been decided that it would be wholly impracticable to lay any other type of material.

North Bluff street, between Milwaukee and First street, at present macadam, has a heavy base, part of which is planned to move a block south for the base of brick. On the south side of South Bluff between Milwaukee and Court streets, on South Main street similar methods are to be employed since in some sections of the unpaved portions of the street, between the Milwaukee and Court streets, a deep crushed stone base, some places from nine to twelve inches deep, is already in.

River street, both north and south of the brick pavement between Milwaukee and Pleasant streets, will have to have a base laid and the cost will consequently be considerably higher than the two sections of the street have never received any permanent improvements. The presence of the railway right-of-way, however, makes it impossible to build brick approaches.

on the first block of South Bluff street. The idea of the board is to have the first block of South Bluff street between Milwaukee and Main streets in the downtown section paved with brick. The same is true on South Main street. Much of the base on these sections of the street has been excavated and can be used where the foundation layer is thinner.

INFORM THE POLICE IF YOU'VE SEEN HER

Department Looking for Woman Who Took Towels and Underwear and a Bath, as They Figure.

"We'd better have a police matron and send her out to look for some woman who just took a bath," remarked the police this morning, after Chief Champlin had informed the police of the disappearance of a woman who had been seen taking a bath in the Fourth ward, who last night made away with five Turkish bath towels, ladies' handkerchiefs and ladies' underwear.

The thieves took the towels and kerchiefs Monday night and the clothing last night. This brought up another question: "Have you seen her?"

"I've supplied the police with a description of the woman who was seen taking a bath, and just dashed out and raised the supply on the line."

"I've been here," said a woman who was seen taking a bath, "but I wouldn't want to wander around naked even on a night like last night. I'm a married woman."

"You can never tell what woman it is," declared another, as she picked up her baton and started for her post.

Lines in the yards of Mrs. Julia Schwan, 538 South Franklin, and Mrs. Elizabeth Bennitt, who lives at 538, were those robbed.

Monday night they called on Mrs. Sigmund, who lives at 538, and they visited Mrs. Bennitt and took the underwear. The latter lady cannot well afford to stand the loss.

When she found the several suits missing at nine o'clock last night, after a hard day's labor, she was distressed. However, she immediately called up the several families whose washing she did and informed them of the theft. In most cases the thieves had been seen in the neighborhood.

Her loss much better than she. Nevertheless the lady plans to make good the loss if she will be permitted.

Late this afternoon the police had found the woman who appeared to have just taken a bath.

GIVEN PROPOSITION TO MOVE FACTORY TO LOCATION IN CITY

Commercial Club Committee Has Conference With Heads of Big Manufacturing Concern.

On Tuesday the directors of the Commercial club and the special committee which visited Chicago last week to inspect several factory propositions, entered the heads of a large manufacturing concern that is seeking a location outside of Chicago for their factory to avoid labor troubles. The gentlemen arrived here in the morning and were shown several possible sites for a temporary factory for part of their output and also a building suitable for their entire plant. An agreement was made to meet them as to what the Commercial club would do if they decided to accept the offer and the matter will be decided after a conference at their Chicago factory.

The gentlemen expressed themselves as much pleased with the city and the various sites offered them and returned to Chicago on a late afternoon train. This is one of the best factory propositions that has been offered the Commercial club for some time past and would employ in the neighborhood a large number of men.

MADISON MAN FATALLY HURT IN AN ELEVATOR ACCIDENT

(JANESVILLE GAZETTE SPECIAL)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—Henry Sturtin falls to recover from the injuries received in the Madison Saddle company's elevator last Friday. It will be the third fatality from the same cause within a month in the industrial commission. The other two occurred in Milwaukee factories. In each case a workman tried to board a moving elevator, slipped and was caught and crushed between the ascending elevator and the floor above.

"This foolhardy practice of jumping on and off the elevator while it is in motion, is responsible for a large number of accidents and should be strictly forbidden by employers who are anxious to save lives and reduce their liability insurance rates," said Chairman J. D. Beck of the commission. It will be almost a miracle if Sturtin recovers, because his body was forced into a space only three inches wide between the elevator and the floor beam.

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR EDGERTON ROOTERS

Whole Town Supporting Victorious Football Team—Will Send Large Delegation to La Crosse Game

Edgerton, Nov. 22.—The city of Edgerton has never in its history been so widely advertised through the state and surrounding country as it has this fall since its foot ball team has won so many victories and stands well to capture the championship of the state. The citizens are wide awake to the fact that our team is playing a clean, fast game and that it is composed of an aggregation of men that would do credit to any city. That they stand for clean sportsmanship is an assured fact wherever they play the daily papers of the different cities make the best comment upon the manner in which the Edgerton boys conduct themselves. A game with La Crosse has been arranged for Thanksgiving day at that city and a special train will be sent to go to La Crosse. The train will be steel equipment, the best available, and the train will also be composed of the National Bird will be served. The Edgerton band will also accompany the team to help boost them on to victory.

A special dinner will be served the team at about 11:00 o'clock so that they will be ready for the game. Although the number of tickets required for the train can be fully subscribed in the city it is thought proper to have a number of tickets sent to the National Convention which will be held at Indianapolis. NEW MYERS THEATRE.

There is a certain magnet about the music of Victor Herbert no matter who his collaborator may be in the construction of his operetta, but when the celebrated composer's name is linked with that of Henry Blossom, tremendous success invariably follows. In this connection "The Princess Pat," the latest triumph from the pens of these gifted writers, may safely be conceded their best. "The Princess Pat" ran for six months at the Cort Theatre, New York, last season to enormous business, and continued its success on tour. This season practically the complete original cast has been retained for a country wide tour and will be the attraction at Jivers Theatre, St. Paul, on November 26th, coming direct from the Davidson Theatre, Milwaukee, after a successful engagement of two months at the Garrick Theatre, Chicago.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson.
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am twenty-three years old. I have been keeping company with a young man for almost a year. Last June he left with the soldiers for the border and has not returned yet. When he went he used to write to me almost every day, and wanted me to write to him often. I did until he wrote me late. Then I gave up writing to him so often, because he never writes to me more than once a week. Once in a while I hear from him twice a week. I am very much in love with him and I do not care to go out with any other men while he is away. He told me that he does not care for any one but me. I am puzzled about his not writing to me as often as he used to. Do you think he doesn't care for me anymore? It would make me very unhappy if he should take other girls out as long as he knows that I don't go out with other fellows. What would you do if you were in my place?

(2) He writes his letters the same as he used to write them. He seems to care a little for me. Do you think he ought to write to me often?

(3) I am so worried that he doesn't write to me often. How often would you advise me to write to him? The same as ever? A short letter or do you think I ought not to write him any more at all?

(4) Would you advise me to go out with other boys while he is gone as long as I care only for him and no one else? He is well liked by all my friends and everyone that knows him, and he is the nicest boy I ever went out with. All I am doing while he is gone is worrying about him. Tell me what you would do if you were in my place.

WORRIED MARI.

Banana Custard—Two eggs, four tablespoons sugar, two cups scalded milk, two bananas, one teaspoon vanilla. Line a buttered baking dish

(1) A great many people find letter writing disagreeable. Probably your friend has become tired of it and finds it an effort to write as often as he did at first. Judge by the tone of the letters rather than their frequency. Don't ask him if he is going with other girls, because probably he is not. I haven't heard of a man yet who has found a girl he likes down there.

(2) I think if he writes once a week he is writing rather often, and you have no reason to complain.

(3) Write to him about once a week and don't make your letters more than four or six pages long.

(4) I think you ought to force yourself to go with other boys and take an interest in them. It is bad to think only of one man and to allow yourself to worry about him continually. There is no greater suffering for a young person.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a boy of seventeen and have been going with a girl of fifteen. I made a date with her and she did not meet me. She told me that her father said she was too young to keep company. The next evening I met her with another fellow. Did she do right in not keeping the date with me?

(2) I became angry and started a fuss and did not talk to her. Did I do right?

(3) Are boys of seventeen old enough to go with girls? If so, how late should they stay with them at night?

(4) Is it right for girls of fifteen to go to moving picture shows with boys at night?

(5) You should have asked to call for her at her home. I don't blame her for not wanting to meet you. She should not have made the date in the first place, however, unless she intended to keep it.

(6) It is childish to act so. You should have spoken as usual, but not asked for any more dates.

(7) When boys are about seventeen or eighteen most of them start to go with girls. Ten o'clock is late enough for them to be out with them.

(8) No.

In reply to F. K. You can get the information you want at a police station.

Household Hints

MINCEMEAT.

Two pounds lean beef chopped fine, half pound suet, one-half pound raisins, one pound currants, half pound citron, one pint molasses, two cups brown sugar, one quart cider, one peck chopped apples, half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon mace, half teaspoon allspice and cloves, two grated nutmegs. About half a pint of brandy (if desired) added gives a nice flavor and also helps to keep it for a long time, but is not necessary.

Mix well and put into a crock or Mason jars and keep in a cool place.

SANDWICHES.

Nut-Honey Sandwich—This is a delicious new sandwich. Mix equal parts of peanut butter and strained honey, spread thickly between whole wheat or graham bread.

MOCCASINS FOR BABY.

Lovely little moccasins for the baby can be made from the soft leather lining of an old handbag. Cut after a pattern. Buttonholes can be worked, or eyelets worked and laces used. They are very soft and comfortable.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

When preparing a cup of coffee for one who is chilled or exhausted or is trying to resist a craving for the cup that mediates, place a very tiny bit of cayenne pepper in the heated cup before pouring in the coffee.

For Mothers who wish to take a small child or baby where it will be exposed to the cold—Make a little garment of some sort of medium heavy wrapping paper and pin on the child between his undershirt and dress. This is a great protection against the cold and a child can easily be taken out in cold if otherwise wrapped warm without any fear of its catching cold.

THE TABLE.

Set Pudding (for Thanksgiving, good economical)—One egg, one-half cup raisins, one-half cup chopped suet, one-half cup brown sugar, one tablespoon molasses, one-half cup sour milk, level teaspoon soda, a little baking powder, four to six sticks. Steam one hour.

Rice Pudding—Plain boiled rice. Sauce: Chop half cup raisins, cook in one cup boiling water ten minutes; add one cup sugar, one tablespoon cornstarch, boil one minute longer. Take from fire, add one teaspoon butter, one teaspoon vinegar.

Whipped Cream With Eggs—Two cups granulated sugar, two cups sweet milk, two tablespoons lard or butter, pinch of salt, four cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon vanilla. Bake in hot oven.

"Faulty Nutrition and Elimination"

—these are the cause of the most of the ailments that afflict human beings. Too much indigestible food and lack of power to throw off the poisons that come from indigestion—these lead to a long line of distressing disorders. Avoid them by eating Shredded Wheat Biscuit—a simple, elemental food that contains all the body-building material in the whole wheat grain, including the bran coat which keeps the intestinal tract healthy and clean. Delicious for any meal with bananas or other fruits. Made at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

HOGWALLOW LOCALS

By GEORGE BINGHAM

Foke Easley happened to what came near being a painful accident one day this week while up on the housetop repairing his chimney. In some way his foot slipped while he was not looking and he fell into it, lodging about half way down. All effort to rescue him failed but finally his wife built a fire out of dog hair and smoked him out.

While lighting his pipe at the Post-office the other morning Isaac Hellwanger said that if what everybody said was so, everybody could take the same side of a question in a debate.

THE LOCKED MIND.

"I have locked my heart and thrown away the key." If you have ever heard the inimitable One song, "She's the Lass for Me," you doubtless remember that line.

I thought of it, or rather of a slightly different version, the other day, when, at the end of a discussion in which the Wants-To-Be-Cynic had unconvincingly had the better of the argument, the Author's Wife turned away with a set expression about her mouth which said more plainly than words, "You can't convince me because I won't be convinced."

"The slightly different version of which I thought was, 'I have locked my mind, and thrown away the key.' Don't you know a good many people who could, with truth, say that? They Are The Most Exasperating People In The World."

I do. And I don't know anything in the world more exasperating. There are two kinds of arguments—arguments about matters of opinion and arguments about matters of fact. Take the first. It is possible that one might, honestly fail to be convinced about some question which was a matter of opinion, even if an opponent had some very telling arguments to bring up. Nevertheless, that a good many people think are their opinions, are nothing but their prejudices. Prejudices are opinions that have been put into cold storage. An honest opinion is a cold thing to have. A prejudice is a rotten thing to have.

Opinions and Prejudices Look The Same On The Outside. But both (like the cold storage and the fresh egg) look exactly the same on the outside and you can't tell which your opponent has.

But in the other kind of argument, that about matters of fact, to remain unconvinced, when a fact is presented to you on perfectly good authority, is to say that you are stupid. It is to "lock" your mind and throw away the key.

We were arguing the other day, as to whether if a wife is the step-mother of the children by the first marriage, she should be allowed to look in the dictionary. We found this: "The wife of one's father by a subsequent marriage. Doesn't that settle the question since it was the meaning of the word that was in question?" She simply says "I don't believe it." Yet the woman who had been said, holding the opposite view simply said, "I don't believe it."

Plainly she was not looking for truth. She preferred her opinion, and lest truth get in and change it, she had "locked her mind and thrown away the key."

An open mind and an open heart—the mind open for truth and the heart open for sympathy—are two signs of the personality that is educated in the highest sense of the word.

The Highflyers

A Fifteen-Dollar Negligee, to Be Worn Once or Twice, Is Marjory's Latest Whim.

"I want it to be a soft shade of pink silk trimmed with flimsy lace—"

"I should not think silk would be serviceable to wear over your nightgown," objected Tom.

"Serviceable! What does a man know about such things. I don't want anything serviceable. This is a little silk bed jacket to put on over my nightgown when I have company. The doctor says I may see my friends for a few minutes this week."

"Oh, so you are to begin to gyrate socially?" cried Tom. "You are out of bed," grinned Tom. "That is all right so long as you obey the doctor's orders and do not expose yourself. No more, getting out of bed for social events. Tom here, not alluded to the cause of her sickness before."

Marjory tossed her head and reverted again to the former topic of conversation. "If you go to Grant's and ask for clerk number seventeen she will know my size and you can leave it to her to attend to. Have it sent to the girls just the minute the doctor gives me permission to see them. I am so tired of seeing nobody but that timesome nurse."

"I do not count for anybody, I see." A sarcastic smile curled Tom's lips. "Don't be touchy. Besides you have not hurt yourself staying at home while I was sick," retorted Marjory.

"I was here as soon as you were able to have anybody around," snapped Tom. "There was no use moping around here when there was nothing I could do, and you were in no danger. I didn't go while you were so very sick."

"Oh, that is all right. I can't blame anyone for getting out of here when it was possible." An expression of emptiness and insanity spread over her face. "Besides you kept me in flowers, which was a nice boy." She reached out her hand and drew Tom's face down to be kissed. "I have not thanked you for them, have I?" Tom looked pleased.

"Hand me the mirror, dear." She looked searchingly in the glass. "I am awfully pale, but the pink silk will tell that a little. Be sure to tell the clerk I want a soft shade. I hope I will not keep this long. I was just about plump enough before I was sick."

Tom kissed her good-bye and left the house, inwardly grumbling that he was asked to buy more useless toggery when he had such a heavy doctor's bill to meet. Her sickness had evidently not purged his wife of vanity, and he had not the heart to object to her first request. "She has had nothing new for over two weeks, how could I object?" he grumbled. If he had been wiser he would have assisted in selecting the negligee, and in that event Marjory would not have been delighted with a gauzy thing prized fifteen dollars. The clerk took pains to give her customer something she knew would please her. She was wearing it as she arrived. He told her truthfully that it was very becoming and Marjory was so delighted that she did not complain all the evening.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

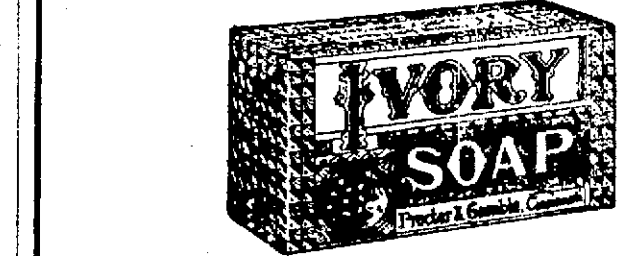

A WOMAN'S AGE

"Old age" used to be a satisfactory diagnosis to patient and physician alike, but it is no longer good form. The physician who enters such a phrase on a death certificate now is liable to investigation by the health department. The question is: What is he trying to conceal? The answer is, usually his own ignorance.

"Children's diseases," so-called, are prevalent among children, not because children have any particular right to them or any special susceptibility, but only because we are so reckless in exposing children to infection in our on paper hygienic schoolrooms, schoolrooms, for instance, where the air would stagger a mid-afternoon visitor, where the teacher breathes a plan far above her charge but is content with foul, warm air.

"You will outgrow it," is the stock evasion of the incompetent physician, the pretender who hasn't the time or inclination to make a correct diagnosis, or the ability to advise proper treatment. Among the diseases a child never "outgrows" are cross-eyes, adenoids, catarrhal rhinitis, spinal curvature, tic, scurvy, rickets, nates, flat feet, shoulder pigoon, breast running ear, infected tonsils and decayed teeth. More frequently the disease outgrows the child-makes him a permanent invalid.

"The change of life" is the veriest illusion in so far as health is concerned. No functional or organic diseases whatever can be truthfully attributed to woman's age. Certainly many functional and organic ailments begin to manifest themselves around middle age, but this is quite regardless of the accident of sex. The "change of life" is a term used by the ignorant old fishwives, yes, perhaps here and there still superstitious practitioners of medicine, still foster this notion for all there is in it, but no sensible woman will consider it

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—The so-called student rioting cases will come before the circuit court on Saturday for final disposition. When it is expected that District Attorney Sauthoff will move for their dismissal. These cases arose last June when the freshmen, in celebrating over the disbanding of their green caps, marched up town and some of them attempted to break into the local theatre. A number of the students were arrested and charged with rioting. Attorney Charles H. Crownhart was retained to defend the students and secured a continuance of the cases over the summer. District Attorney Sauthoff is so pleased with the conduct of the students this year that it is expected that he will move for a dismissal of the cases.

The QUARTERBREED

By ROBERT AMES BENNET

(Copyright by Brown & Howell Co.)

"Gad! If only you weren't such a self-righteous prig!" exclaimed the younger man. "You're so sure you can show cards and spades to the angels! I'm out for the good things of life, and I make no bones over it. But that doesn't prevent me from being a blooming benefactor as well. If you wish to know the real reason why I'm resigning, it's because I have planned to go on to Washington with the delegation, and pull wires to get the tribe a big slice of graft for their mineral lands."

Hardly saw the frank sincerity in his companion's eyes, and responded to the assertion with an instant apology: "Mr. Vandervyn, I beg your pardon for misjudging you. At times your conduct has been ill-advised, but I no longer doubt your good intentions."

"It takes an officer and gentleman to eat crow as it is termed," rallied Vandervyn with seemingly genial sarcasm. "Do I understand that my resignation is accepted?"

"If you insist."

"I do. Now that is settled. We make the return trip as equals," said Vandervyn, and, as if freed from all rancor by the thought, he fell into a mood of suave gaiety.

CHAPTER XV.

A Lover's Promise.

When, mid-afternoon of the next day, the two white men and the pair of Indian police emerged from the canyon of Sioux creek into the agency valley, Vandervyn was still as gay and good-humored as at the start of the journey. He even volunteered to intervene for Hardy with Marie.

"It is very kind of you to make the offer," replied Hardy in rather a stiff tone. "If Dupont is at home, may I ask you to send him to the office?"

"Certainly," replied Vandervyn, and all the way down to the agency he chatted gaily. When they came to the level behind the warehouse, he waved his hand in friendly parting. "Slong, see you later. Be sure to chop off your whiskers in time for supper. You'll need to look your best."

Dupont soon clumped into the agency office, fairly oozing with jovial friendliness.

"Howdy! Howdy, Cap!" he greeted. "Marie, she says she'll look to see you at supper. Mr. Van says you wanted to see me. Anything I can do, Cap, just call on me. I'm ready to call quits now, if you are."

Hardy accepted the proffered hand, and exchanged a cordial grip.

"This pleases me very much, Dupont," he responded. "We will all now work together for the tribe. I give you my best wishes that you may win the mine."

"We got a fair show to seeing as how you ain't going to let on about it in your report. Now, just tell me what I can do for you."

"Merely a few words as interpreter," said Hardy. "I wish one of the police at once to ride over to the railroad with these telegrams and letters. The sooner I receive instructions to send the delegation to Washington, the better."

"That's no lie, Mr. Van says the money can't be appropriated till congress meets, but the treaty is fixed up so's the amount can be settled on and the reservation ordered divided up by the treaty commission."

"Ah!" exclaimed Hardy. "We may get the agricultural lands allotted in time for the planting of winter wheat. Come; we will send off these telegrams and letters."

Since the return of the party from the mountains, not one of the police but was more than willing to serve the new agent. Two of the younger men were soon cantering away down the valley on their best ponies, proud of the fact that they had been chosen to make the night ride to the railroad. Hardy returned to the office with Dupont, and became deeply absorbed in discussing ways and means for the development of the Indians as farmers. When Dupont noted the hour, there seemed scarcely time for even one of the captain's quick-change tolls. Yet he appeared at the door of the Dupont house, spick and span and his beard clean shaven, without having required his hostess to wait supper half a minute.

As he entered in response to Dupont's hospitable bellow, there was a perceptible hesitancy in his manner. Marie was seated at the far end of the room near Vandervyn. She rose, and came forward to greet Hardy, her chin proudly uplilt.

"There seems to have been a general misunderstanding of motives, captain," she remarked with frank directness. "I still consider that you were unduly harsh, but I now understand that you meant well and perhaps had some excuse. Reggie says that we are all to work together for the good of the tribe."

"It pleases me very much to hear you say it."

"What interest have you in helping them?" she queried, evidently reluctant to believe his motives unselfish.

"It means a good mark on his official record," bantered Vandervyn. "Every little thing counts on promotion—like merit marks at school."

"You see!" agreed Hardy. "I can't pretend to altruism. I am ambitious to stand well in my profession. If I make a good showing when given a detail, I put merit marks on my record, as Mr. Vandervyn has so aptly expressed it."

Marie's challenging gaze softened, and she looked thoughtfully down at her white hands.

"Isn't even self-sacrifice a form of selfishness?" she murmured.

The appearance of the Indian boy in the dining room doorway checked Hardy's reply.

During supper the girl remained unusually thoughtful and silent. Hardy discussed with Dupont plans for the instruction of the tribe in agriculture. The idea had occurred to him that the government might permit him to build an irrigation system for the farming lands of the tribe, using Indian laborers, and paying for the work out of money appropriated for the sale of the mineral lands. When Vandervyn chose to listen, it was with a half-amused smile that did not always cover the underlying cynical irony. Most of the time he devoted himself to an attempt to rally Marie out of her thoughtfulness. Instead of responding, she became more pensive. Hardy attributed the girl's half-somber quietness to his presence. As they left the supper table, he asked Dupont to come to the office.

Marie and Vandervyn followed them as far as the parlor, where the young man dropped into the easiest chair, with a disgruntled, "Lord! he makes me weary—all that benevolent blather!"

"Of course he is doing it merely to help himself in his career," murmured Marie.

"Or to get the handling of the tribal funds," suggested Vandervyn. "There'll be a fat slice of graft for somebody out of all those millions."

"You really think that?"

"What else can you expect—government on one side and Poor Lo on the other? It's the usual thing. I expect to get my share."

"You?" exclaimed the girl, her eyes widening with a look of astonishment and reproach.

Vandervyn laughed amusedly. "Wait a bit before you dig up your tomahawk, Miss Sitting Bull. If I succeed in getting the tribe fifteen or twenty millions, instead of the five that was talked about, it strikes me they could afford to allow yours truly a nice little percentage as commission."

"Oh, Reggie, pardon me! Of course you should have good pay for proving yourself such a friend to the tribe."

"And to each member of the tribe!" he added, his blue eyes glowing golden with ardor. "I don't want all my pay in money. How about an advance royalty in—something else?"

He had risen, and was coming toward her. She blushed and retreated around the tea table.

"No, no," she remonstrated. "I told you we must wait until you are freed from your—cousin."

"Wait?" he rejoined. "You're trying to play me against that untold here. Do you think I'm going to stand for that? I'll have to go on at once, and fix things so that the delegation will not have to hang round the capitol all winter." "You will have to leave before the delegation." The girl was almost dismayed at the unexpectedness of the announcement.

"I'll have to go at once," repeated Vandervyn, frowning. "I thought of course he would have told me before sending his messages. I could have so worried them for him that the game would have started off without a hitch. As it is, he has messed things up in a way that will require the presence of a good lobbyist to pull off the game in any kind of shape to suit us."

"No, We Must Wait Until You Are Freed From Your—Cousin."

"I do not like the way you speak of it—a game, lobbying," murmured Marie.

Dinner Stories

A dusky washerlady was being courted by a white man who approached her as she stood at her wash tub and begged her to marry him. After a few preliminary greetings she turned to him with:

"Is you-all shore yo' loves me?"

"Go on, I's shore," was the indignant response.

There followed a moment of silence, during which she attacked her wash with vigor. Then, pausing an instant in her work, she added, suspiciously:

"You-all ain't lost yo' job, has you?"

An old but sturdy Irishman, who had made a reputation as a gang boss, was given a job with a railroad construction company at Port Arthur, Texas. One day when the sun was hotter than usual his gang of black hangers began to shirk, and as the chief engineer rode up on his horse the Irishman was heard to shout:

"Allez—you sons of guns—allez!" Then, turning to the engineer, he said, "I curse the day I ever learned their language."

"That boy of mine is always asking questions," he went on, "perhaps he wants to learn something."

"Maybe so, but his inquisitiveness is rather distressing to me at times."

"Yes," he insists on being told what his mother means when she calls me a jellyfish, a matrimonial misfit and a human tank."

"Can't we pad out our currency by using paper money?" asked the ruler of a country in pecuniary difficulty.

"With the present scarcity of paper," exclaimed the minister of financial affairs, "impossible! Bills of the smallest fact value would be worth an enormous premium."

Forty Years Ago

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Nov. 22, 1876.—This has been the most wintry day of the season.

Another excursion is being gotten up to Kansas. The rates are cheap and the time ample to make an extended trip to the southwest.

The burning out of a chimney on Elm street last evening about seven o'clock created the alarm of fire. The Washington engine got out and crossed over the Milwaukee street bridge before the facts regarding the alarm were known. No. 2, having the full particulars, did not take their engine out.

The grading of Wisconsin street, in the second ward, seems to be a matter on which there exists a difference of opinion. The council spent most of their time last night in discussing the subject, and finally by a vote of six to two passed an order authorizing the work to be done. There was a very respectable remonstrance against the grading signed by thirteen persons who live on the southern end of the street. These consider the expense too great to be incurred while there will be no corresponding benefit gained by the grading. On the other hand, there are those who want the sand bank in the second ward, which is an eyesore, removed and the street properly graded, as it should be under any favorable circumstances. Whether the council did a judicious or an injudicious thing in passing the order it is not for us to determine. The parties directly interested are the ones to pronounce judgment.

Bodily Housekeeping

(By Samuel Hamilton, M. D.)
The subject of drinking water with meals has been misunderstood.

In recent years investigation by means of X-rays, the observations of scientists such as Cannon, Grutzner, Pavlov, Fowler, Hawk, prove that an abundance of water taken during digestion is necessary in good bodily housekeeping. Drink plenty of water both between meals and with each meal. Do not drink ice-water at any time.

If your kidneys are sick, or you suffer with lumbago or rheumatism at times, pain in the back or back of the neck, take a little Anuric before meals. This can be found at any good drug store. Therefore my advice to young or old is, always drink plenty of pure water. And for long life occasionally take tablets of Anuric three or four times a day.
